

TERRY RICHARDSON

Fashion Photographer

TERRY RICHARDSON

- Terry Richardson was born August 14, 1965 in New York City.
- Terry's dad was a schizophrenic fashion photographer and his mother was a fashion photographer named Anny Lomax. Anny later got into a car accident which caused her to be bedridden. Also, Terry's dad had a drug addiction. Terry grew up in Los Angeles, in high school his interests led him to take photography lessons, for which he soon fell in love with.
- Terry's mom got him a job as a photography assistant with Tony Kent. This job gave Terry the experience he needed.

- Terry's styles of work was "Amateur" aesthetic, Punk aesthetic photography.
 - Terry was influenced by his mom and dad to become a photographer, because they were both photographers.
 - Terry was nominated best direction and video of the year categories at sundays MTV video music awards for Miley Cyrus' "Wrecking Ball".

TERRY RICHARDSON

- My opinion on Terry is that even with a really stressful environment as a child he still managed to be very successful.
- Terry's photos are popular, but people think he abuses the models he photographs

What Terry Richardson thinks about his photography

“I like using snapshot cameras because they're idiot-proof. I have bad eyesight, and I'm no good at focusing big cameras.”

“I always say I make pictures rather than take pictures.”
